Involves Donald Trump

DWF Labs buys $25 million of World Liberty tokens

B Reported

Both sides acknowledged the purchase: DWF Labs announced it, with a statement from World Liberty's co-founder, and CoinDesk and Decrypt reported it, though both rely on that announcement rather than confirming it separately. The family's share is only an estimate from World Liberty's published revenue terms as reported by CNBC and Reuters. Tier B rests on the payer's own announcement quoting World Liberty's co-founder; the news reports are not independent confirmation of the purchase.

REACHED THE FAMILY

Apr 2025 month precision

$25,000,000 exact

The $25 million is the price DWF Labs announced for its WLFI tokens, bought in a private transaction with World Liberty Financial. It went to World Liberty, not directly to the family. World Liberty's published terms, as reported by CNBC and Reuters, entitle DT Marks DEFI LLC, a Trump-affiliated entity, to 75% of net token sale revenue after agreed expenses and reserves. Applied to this sale, that would be roughly $18.75 million before those deductions. This is an estimate only, because the deductions and how this sale was booked are not public. The purchase likely falls within the 2025 token sale proceeds counted in wlf-tokens, so the two amounts should not be added together.

WHAT HAPPENED

On April 16, 2025, DWF Labs, a Dubai-based crypto market maker and investor, announced that it had bought $25 million of WLFI tokens from World Liberty Financial in a private transaction. The tokens carry governance rights in World Liberty, the crypto venture in which a Trump-affiliated entity, DT Marks DEFI LLC, holds a large stake. DWF also said it would provide trading liquidity for USD1, World Liberty's dollar stablecoin, and would open a New York office that would, among other things, engage with U.S. policymakers.

World Liberty's published terms, as reported by CNBC and Reuters, entitle DT Marks DEFI to 75% of net token sale revenue after agreed expenses and reserves. Applied to this sale, that would be roughly $18.75 million before those deductions, but the deductions and how this sale was booked are not public. The purchase likely falls within the 2025 token sale proceeds already counted in the World Liberty token sales entry.

No federal action involving DWF Labs has been identified. The entry records a payment by a foreign firm into a family-controlled crypto venture.

THEIR RESPONSE

In DWF's announcement, World Liberty co-founder Zak Folkman welcomed the investment and said DWF would help speed up the infrastructure World Liberty is building. None of the cited reports includes a White House comment.
