WHAT HAPPENED

Freight Technologies, a Nasdaq-listed logistics company focused on U.S.-Mexico trade, announced on April 30, 2025 that it had arranged up to $20 million in financing to be used exclusively to buy the president's $TRUMP meme coin.

The company's CEO, Javier Selgas, said in the release filed with the SEC that buying the president's coin was "an effective way to advocate for fair, balanced, and free trade between Mexico and the US." Trump's disclosure reports more than $635 million in meme coin royalties for 2025 (see the $TRUMP entry); how much of this company's buying reached Trump-linked entities is not disclosed.

No U.S. government action benefiting the company has been identified. It is listed because the company explicitly tied buying the president's coin to trade policy.

THEIR RESPONSE

CEO Javier Selgas called the purchase a way to diversify the treasury and "an effective way to advocate for fair, balanced, and free trade between Mexico and the US."
