$635,068,835 exact

$635,068,835 in 2025 royalties to CIC Digital LLC under a license agreement with Celebration Coins, the licensee that paid them, read directly from Trump's annual disclosure for 2025 (Schedule 1, line 21.6); Fox Business (via Bloomberg) and Fortune reported it as more than $635 million. A sublicense with JBCZ Group, LLC paid a further $493,846 (Schedule 1, line 21.7), not counted here. Separately, Inca Digital estimated buyers spent about $148 million on the coin to qualify for the May 2025 dinner. CBS News (Oct 14, 2026), using Arkham data, found that at least 52 of the top 100 wallets on the November gala leaderboard moved funds through exchanges that bar U.S. customers; CBS says that is the only certain fact, not proof the buyers are foreign.

WHAT HAPPENED

$TRUMP is a meme coin tied to the president. Trump's 2025 financial disclosure reports $635,068,835 in royalties to his company CIC Digital LLC under a license agreement with Celebration Coins (Schedule 1, line 21.6), the more than $635 million Fox Business and Fortune reported.

The coin's promoters ran a contest from April 23 to May 12, 2025, announcing that the 220 largest holders would get dinner with the president. Reuters, citing the analytics firm Inca Digital, estimated buyers spent about $148 million on the coin to qualify, and found more than half of the qualifying holders were likely outside the U.S. The dinner took place May 22, 2025 at Trump's golf club in Sterling, Virginia, with a private reception for the top 25.

The top holder was crypto entrepreneur Justin Sun, whose SEC fraud case had been paused in February. The White House said Trump attended on his personal time.

THEIR RESPONSE

White House press secretary Karoline Leavitt said the president's assets are in a trust managed by his children and that he attended the dinner on his personal time, not as a White House event. On the November event, a White House official told CBS the administration acts in the best interest of the American people and called the dinner a private event; the Trump Organization did not respond to CBS.
